

Sam Oen was my direct report at One More Cloud, Inc. He reported to me in his role as a Platform Engineer. While working with me Sam built and operated systems written in Ruby, Go, Java, Crystal, and Bash. While there he also helped transition us from a pure x86 architecture to an ARM architecture that helped cut our OpEx by 30%. He is a thoughtful and diligent software developer that has helped to manage a platform running across multiple clouds (AWS, GCP) and consisting of over 5,000 machines in various geographical regions.

As a person, I enjoyed working with Sam, even though we were 12 timezones apart. I could always count on him to engage in our conversations about technical details or business objectives.
